A multi-layered exploration of trauma, memory, grief and addiction

In 1993, aged twenty, Carmel Mc Mahon left Ireland for New York, carrying two suitcases and a ton of unseen baggage. It took years, and a bitter struggle with alcohol addiction, to unpick the intricate traumas of her past and present.

From tragically lost siblings to the broader social scars of the Famine and the Magdalene Laundries, In Ordinary Time mines the ways that trauma reverberates through time and through individual lives, drawing connections to the events and rhythms of Ireland's long history.

A rising star historian brings Dickensian London to real and vivid life

For the first time, this innovative social history brilliantly – and radically – shows us the city's most compelling period (1780–1870) at street level.

From beggars and thieves to musicians and missionaries, porters and hawkers to sex workers and street criers, Jensen unites a breadth of original research and first-hand accounts to tell their stories in their own words.

What emerges is a buzzing, cosmopolitan world of the working classes, diverse in gender, ethnicity, origin, ability and occupation – a world that challenges and fascinates us still.

A dazzling scientific and cultural adventure through our ideas about the cosmos

One of the most potent questions we ask about the cosmos is: are we alone?

The Possibility of Life traces our scientific understanding of what and where life in the universe could be, from Galileo and Copernicus through to our current tracking of exoplanets in the 'Goldilocks zone', where life akin to ours on Earth might exist.

Along the way, Jaime Green interweaves insights from a long tradition of science fiction that uses imagination to extrapolate worlds, in turn inspiring scientists and their research.

A positive manifesto for regenerating our planet through the power of natural capital

The Case for Nature sets out with expert clarity how protecting nature is both the right thing to do, and in our economic interests; and how, taking a cue from many indigenous worldviews, nature must be woven into our modern societies, not set apart.

Siddarth Shrikanth introduces the pioneers of the nature-positive revolution who are tackling the biodiversity crisis and explains 'natural capital', giving us the tools to understand how our economies can work with, not against, our living planet.

Return to Measham Hall in this 17th-century tale of espionage and intrigue

For Nicholas Hawthorne, the Catholic heir to Measham Hall, subterfuge is everyday. But there are deeper and darker secrets even than his family's outlawed religion: why is his father, Sir William, so reclusive? What became of his mother, and his boundary-defying aunt Alethea? And who fatally betrayed his cousin Matthew?

As England slides towards invasion by the Protestant forces of Prince William of Orange, Nicholas becomes entangled in conspiracies within King James II's court – and soon learns that both truth and love come at a high price.

A landmark history exploring and celebrating the lives of Black Victorians

Our vision of Victorian Britain tends to the monolithic – white, imperialist, prurient, patrician. However, there was another, more diverse Britain, populated by people of colour marking extraordinary achievements.

In this deeply researched, dynamic and revelatory history, Abraham and Woolf draw our attention to marginalised Black Victorians, showing how Black lives were visible, present and influential.

Experience this fictional village in Exmoor and the dramas that unfold...

When a cosy country cottage goes up for sale in Combe Tollbridge, a small fishing village tucked away on a quiet corner of the Exmoor coast, young couple Jane and Jasper decide to make the move.

But whilst Jane is returning to the place of happy childhood memories by the sea, another recent newcomer to the village, Angela, has sadder reasons for her move.

Receiving a warm welcome from the colourful residents who call the village home, all three soon become embroiled in rural life, and find it not as sedate as they might have once imagined...

PAPERBACK ORIGINAL | FICTION

A supernatural comedy adventure about a family of ghost hunters

It's New Year's Eve, and the Rook family are at odds with one another.

Unfortunately, not only is their psychic rival Aurora coming to their hometown, but there's another visitor – Death. The newly appointed Replacement Reaper, who is not grim at all, but a very cute Canadian. He's here to end the world – albeit ethically and politely.

Can the family overcome their differences in time to stop the ultimate New Year Countdown?
